

10/08/10 - Kibbeh Senia

Kibbeh are a Middle Eastern favorite loved by all. From Syrians to Lebanese, from Iraqi to Turkish there are many different versions of Kibbeh, Koobeh, or Kuba. Bulgur crusted dumplings, stuffed with spiced ground meat, kibbeh are most often served deep fried in shapes like torpedoes, and many times served steamed in stews or pot roast as balls, tear drops, or patties, . Kibbeh are all delicious. This recipe, while in the same genre flavor-wise, is not made as individual dumplings, but rather, made in a large baking dish, double crusted, with a filling and cut into portions. This recipe

The ingredients are split into filling or the middle layer, and crust or the top and bottom layer. You will need 3 pounds of ground chuck meat in total. It is always a dilemma whether to list the total amount of an ingredient for the entire dish as one measurement, or list the quantity separately for the various components, as I do in this recipe, so you don't wind up sautéing the whole three pounds of ground beef for the filling. Read the directions before you start this dish, it is a little different conceptually.

For the Filling:

2 large onions, chopped fine

2 tablespoons of oil

1 and 1/2 pounds of ground chuck

2 teaspoons of allspice

1 teaspoon of cinnamon

3 tablespoons of pine nuts

1/2 cup of pecans (or walnuts), chopped chunky

For the Crust:

1 cup of number 1 bulgur (bulgur is numbered by the fineness of the grind)

Water to cover

2 onions cut in chunks

1 green pepper cut in chunks

2 tablespoons of tomato paste

1/2 tsp of pepper

2 tsp of cumin

Salt to taste

Dash of Tabasco or other hot sauce

1 and 1/2 pounds of ground chuck

oil for greasing the baking dish

Preheat a large (12 inch) sauté pan. Add the oil when the pan is hot, lower the temperature to medium, and then add the chopped onions. Slowly sauté the onions until sweet and translucent then add the ground chuck and sauté until well browned on a higher heat. Season the ground meat with the spices, pine nuts, and walnuts. Feel free to adjust the seasoning. Stir and set aside to cool off. The meat should be broken up in to fine crumbles.

Next for the crust, place the bulgur in a bowl and cover it with water. Let the bulgur sit for 20 minutes while it absorbs water. Using your hands, squeeze all liquid out of the bulgur and place it in a large food processor work bowl. Add in all the other ingredients and process until the bulgur resembles dough. You may have to process in two batches depending on the size of your processor or what I prefer is to grind everything except the ground chuck together. I place the ground bulgur in a larger bowl, add the ground chuck to it, and blend it altogether with my gloved hands.

To assemble the Kibbeh, grease a large glass rectangular baking dish with oil (9 x13). Spread 1/2 of the crust mixture evenly over the bottom. Spread the cooked and cooled filling on top. Spread the remaining crust portion on top of the filling, as it is a third layer. Refrigerate one hour until the Kibbeh stiffens. The Kibbeh is easier to precut when it is stiff.

Using a sharp knife, precut diamond shaped servings, about 1 and 1/2 inches to 2 inches in size. Brush the top of the Kibbeh with a couple drops of oil and bake in a preheated oven set at 350° for one half hour. Then turn down the temperature and

I often bake this dish ahead for holidays or parties and I freeze it for a couple of weeks before my event. I freeze it in the baking dish tightly wrapped in heavy duty
